What is the early childhood approach?

The National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS) early childhood approach is a family-centred, holistic, and best practice approach to early intervention for children younger than 9 with disability or children younger than 6 with developmental delay or concerns. This approach is designed to provide children and their families with the support they need to achieve their goals and reach their full potential. If you believe a child younger than 9 may benefit from this support, you can make a referral.

The early childhood partner's role

Early childhood partners are a contact point for families and carers of children younger than 9, seeking support through the NDIS. They help to determine the most appropriate supports for the child and family, tailored to their individual needs and circumstances.

The types of supports provided by an early childhood partner may include connections:

- with mainstream and community services
- to practical information relevant to a child's development
- with other families
- with early supports
- to apply to the NDIS
